Weinberg Capital Partners appoints Gad Botbol Head of Real Estate Activities

Gad Botbol has been promoted to Head of Real Estate Activities at Weinberg Capital Partners. Having been with the firm for more than seven years, he will now be responsible for steering and developing all of the firm's real estate activities. He will draw on the team's expertise to continue managing existing funds and to seize new market opportunities.

Gad Botbol, 41, joined Weinberg Capital Partners in 2019 as Head of Acquisitions. He previously worked at Icade, where he successively held the positions of Head of Investments and Head of Asset Management.

Gad holds degrees from the École spéciale des travaux publics, du bâtiment et de l'industrie (ESTP) and ESSEC Business School.

Gad Botbol, Head of Real Estate Activities at Weinberg Capital Partners, says: "I am delighted to take the helm of Weinberg Capital Partners' real estate activities and to continue the work already underway alongside a team recognized for its excellence. Together, we bring the expertise needed to identify the best opportunities, execute them with discipline, and create lasting value through active management. At this stage of the real estate cycle, our ambition is clear: to invest with selectivity, conviction and rigor."

Serge Weinberg, Chairman of Weinberg Capital Partners, adds: "Gad's appointment reflects our commitment to furthering the development of our real estate activities. His in-depth knowledge of the firm and the market, combined with his experience spanning the entire real estate value chain, are major assets as we enter this new phase and continue to meet our investors' expectations."
